The Perfect Africa Safari Travel Companion

More than three times the size of the United States, Africa is a place that continues to intrigue travelers and adventurers. Where else can you see lions, giraffes, and so many other animals in their natural habitats? Where else can you observe cultures so different from our own? Where else can you view these things from a 4WD vehicle, a hot-air balloon, a canoe, or on foot? Only in Africa.

But experiencing a land still untouched by man's influence is becoming harder to do. With the effects of global warming, and the negative consequences of man's impact on nature's balance ever increasing, now is the time to see Africa before its natural beauty is lost forever.

Mark W. Nolting has been exploring and researching the African continent for over 30 years. Through his books, Africa's Top Wildlife Countries, 7th Edition and African Safari Journal, 5th Edition (©2008, www.AfricanAdventure.com), Nolting makes it easy for first-time visitors to have the experience they have dreamt about.

Now sporting 311 color illustrations of the animals, birds, reptiles, frogs, insects and trees one may encounter PLUS 60 full color maps of both regions and parks, the new 5th Edition of African Safari Journal is better than ever as a take-along guide and as a memory book. As R. Michael W right, President of the African Wildlife Foundation, says, "When traveling on safari you want to pack one book that will reference as much information about Africa as possible. African Safari Journal is an all-encompassing resource

African Safari Journal includes

- A wildlife/botany guide with 311 COLOR illustrations and descriptions of mammals, reptiles, birds, insects and trees for easy identification
- A language guide (phrase book) that includes useful words, phrases and mammal names with phonetics in Swahili, Shona, Tswana, Zulu and French
- A trip organizer to help travelers prepare for their safari, with a place to keep a record of important information
- A map directory with 60 COLOR maps of African countries, parks and reserves, plus constellation maps of the southern skies
- A resource directory with a veritable gold mine of safari tips and difficult-to-find information on Africa
- Checklists for recording personal sightings of mammals, reptiles, birds and trees
- Over 50 journal pages for creating a personal diary of key events of one's safari-of-a-lifetime.

The new expanded and updated Fifth Edition of African Safari Journal is all the more valuable because many safariers now have strict baggage limits and this one book is packed with all the information a traveler to Africa needs.

that covers topics ranging from wildlife facts and photo tips to language guides and banking information.”

With places to write in personal trip information, travelers won't have to be digging through folders for some slip of paper that has the name of the tour company, the time of flights, and the email address for the nice couple they met at the lodge. The book also contains contact information for U.S. Embassies and Canadian and British High Commissions in Africa. The blank journal pages and charts for checking off animals, birds, and trees seen, let travelers make notes each day, making it perfect to refer back to again and again in the weeks and years after a trip. There's even a suggested shopping list with “gift and trade” ideas!

As the Educated Traveler wrote about a previous edition, “You won't use African Safari Journal simply to record your trip. This innovative book — part guidebook, part travel journal — is a nifty planning tool as well. African Safari Journal combines standard tourist information with maps, languages, and a thorough, illustration-rich description of mammals, birds and reptiles and trees you're likely to encounter on your trip. An excellent all-in-one reference.” And Midwest Book Review commented, “An excellent companion to appreciate and record the once-in-a-life-time experiences offered by an exciting African safari...enthusiastically recommended.”

For the more than one million North Americans who travel to Africa each year, African Safari Journal is the perfect travel companion. With its contents, travelers can become instant authorities on safari!
